YEAR A

APRIL 4 & 5 2026

CHRIST IS RISEN, HE IS TRULY RISEN!

ENTRANCE ANTIPHON

I have risen, and I am with you still, alleluia.
You have laid your hand upon me, alleluia.
Too wonderful for me, this knowledge, alleluia, alleluia.

OPENING PRAYER

Let us pray.
O God, who on this day,
through your Only Begotten Son,
have conquered death
and unlocked for us the path to eternity, grant, we pray, that we who keep the solemnity of the Lord's Resurrection
may, through the renewal brought by your Spirit, rise up in the light of life.
Through our Lord Jesus Christ, your Son, who lives and reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit,
God, for ever and ever. Amen.

SUNDAY READINGSFirst Reading*Acts 10:34, 37-43 (JB)

A reading from the Acts of the Apostles

We have eaten and drunk with him after his resurrection from the dead.

Peter addressed Cornelius and his household: You must have heard about the recent happenings in Judaea; about Jesus of Nazareth and how he began in Galilee, after John had been preaching baptism. God had anointed him with the Holy Spirit and with power, and because God was with him, Jesus went about doing good and curing all who had fallen into the power of the devil.' Now I, and those with me, can witness to everything he did throughout the countryside of Judaea and in Jerusalem itself: and also to the fact that they killed him by hanging him on a tree, yet three days afterwards God raised him to life and allowed him to be seen, not by the whole people but only by certain witnesses God had chosen beforehand. Now we are those witnesses - we have eaten and drunk with him after his resurrection from the dead - and he has ordered us to proclaim this to his people and to tell them that God has appointed him to judge everyone, alive or dead. It is to him that all the prophets bear this witness: that all who believe in Jesus will have their sins forgiven through his name.'

The word of the Lord.Thanks be to God.*Responsorial Psalm:

R. This is the day the Lord has made;
let us rejoice and be glad.

Second Reading1 Corinthians 5:6-8 (JB)

A reading from the first letter of St Paul to the Corinthians

Throw away the old yeast, that you may be new dough.

You must know how even a small amount of yeast is enough to leaven all the dough, so get rid of all the old yeast, and make yourselves into a completely new batch of bread, unleavened as you are meant to be. Christ, our Passover, has been sacrificed; let us celebrate the feast, by getting rid of all the old yeast of evil and wickedness, having only the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

The word of the Lord.Thanks be to God.*Gospel Acclamation

Alleluia, alleluia!

Christ has become our paschal sacrifice;
let us feast with joy in the Lord.

Alleluia!

GOSPELMatthew 28:1-10 (JB)

A reading from the holy Gospel according to Matthew

He has risen from the dead and now he is going before you to Galilee.

After the sabbath, and towards dawn on the first day of the week, Mary of Magdala and the other Mary went to visit the sepulchre. And all at once there was a violent earthquake, for the angel of the Lord, descending from heaven, came and rolled away the stone and sat on it. His face was like lightning, his robe white as snow. The guards were so shaken, so frightened of him, that they were like dead men. But the angel spoke, and he said to the women, 'There is no need for you to be afraid. I know you are looking for Jesus, who was crucified. He is not here, for he has risen, as he said he would. Come and see the place where he lay, then go quickly and tell his disciples. "He has risen from the dead and now he is going before you to Galilee; it is there you will see him." Now I have told you.' Filled with awe and great joy the women came quickly away from the tomb and ran to tell the disciples.

And there, coming to meet them, was Jesus. 'Greetings' he said. And the women came up to him and, falling down before him, clasped his feet. Then Jesus said to them, 'Do not be afraid; go and tell my brothers that they must leave for Galilee; they will see me there.'

The Gospel of the Lord.Praise to you, Lord Jesus Christ.

GOSPEL REFLECTION

Sunday, April 5

Easter Sunday

Acts 10:34, 37–43 | 1 Corinthians 5:6–8 | Matthew 28:1–10

Today we celebrate the heart of our faith: Christ is risen! In the Gospel, the women go to the tomb in sorrow, yet they are met with an astonishing message: "He is not here; he has risen." Their fear is quickly turned into joy, and they are sent out as the first witnesses of the Resurrection.

In the first reading, Peter boldly proclaims this same truth—that Jesus, who was crucified, is alive, and that all who believe in Him receive forgiveness and new life. St Paul reminds us that this new life calls for a change within us: we are to "clean out the old yeast" and live as a new people, renewed in Christ.

Easter is not just something that happened long ago—it is a living reality. The risen Christ meets us in our own lives, especially in moments of fear, doubt, and uncertainty, and calls us to trust, to rejoice, and to go out and share the Good News.

Key Thought:

The Resurrection changes everything—bringing hope, new life, and a mission to share Christ with others.

Take-Home Challenge:

This week, be a witness of the Resurrection. Share joy, offer forgiveness, or reach out to someone in need—let your actions reflect the new life you have received in Christ.

Prayer:

Lord Jesus, risen from the dead, fill our hearts with Easter joy. Help us to live as people of hope, renewed in your love, and to share the Good News with all we meet. Amen.

"Jesus, Risen Lord, I rejoice in you!"

Saint John Baptist de La Salle, Priest

C. 1651–1719
Feast Day April 7
Patron Saint of educators

Saint John Baptist de La Salle died on Good Friday, perhaps as a divine sign of the sacrificial life he had lived for the salvation of souls. This wasn't his first death. His first death was of the life he had lived and the renunciation of the world for the sake of the unexpected mission God had given him.

The Reims Cathedral in France was founded in the fifth century. The first Frankish king to be baptized was baptized there by Saint Remigius, leading to the baptism of many others and the Christianization of the kingdom. After that time, the cathedral became the place where most French kings were crowned throughout the centuries. Since the thirteenth-century reconstruction, it has become one of the most ornate and beautiful Gothic cathedrals in France.

Today's saint was born into an upper class family in Reims, and from his youth enjoyed a life of honor and social prestige, as well as an excellent and expensive education. His parents were also very devout. When John was eleven, he received tonsure, and he and his parents made a promise of his lifelong service to the Church. At the age of sixteen, he became a canon of the Reims Cathedral. Canons acted as caretakers of the cathedral and advisors to the archbishop. John was then sent to complete his education at some of the finest schools in France. Shortly after beginning his studies of theology at age twenty-one, his parents both died and he had to return home to care for his six younger siblings and to oversee the family estate. Over the next five years, he completed his theological studies and was ordained a priest at the age of twenty-six. After ordination, he completed his doctorate of theology and immersed himself in the life of a young and well-respected priest.

Father de La Salle's spiritual director, Father Nicolas Roland, was a saintly man who had a heart for the poor and the education of children. He helped found a new religious order called the Sisters of the Child Jesus whose mission was to care for the sick and educate poor girls. Father de La Salle became their chaplain and confessor and assisted them with their work. When Father Roland was dying, he exhorted Father de La Salle to continue the work of educating the poor youth. Father de La Salle reluctantly agreed, not realizing what he was getting himself into. Soon after, Father de La Salle came in contact with a layman, Adrian Nyel, whom he assisted to found a school for poor boys in Reims, followed by a second one.

Father de La Salle found himself in a dilemma. Naturally speaking, he did not feel drawn to the work of establishing schools for the poor, but he found it difficult to resist the sisters and Adrian who were so passionate about this work, and divine inspiration tugged on his heart. He tried to withdraw but later continued to assist them. Little did he know that he had just begun what would become his life's work, and a transforming legacy within the Church.

As time went on, Father de La Salle saw a need to better educate the teachers. He himself had received such an excellent education that he was well aware of the teachers' lack of skills and their poor personal formation. The children that these men were teaching were often very poorly brought up and were "far from salvation," he would later recount. In response, Father de La Salle began inviting the teachers into his own home, sharing meals with them, and teaching them how to be better teachers and men of God. Eventually, he invited them to live with him in his family home so that he could devote even more time to them. This didn't sit well with some of his proud relatives who disdained the idea of him so closely associating himself with the lower social class.

Father de La Salle began to experience resistance and criticism. His social peers accused him of trying to make a name for himself as a founder. Some said he was ambitious. They wondered why he was not interested in maintaining the family's good name, by associating with the peasants. What about his canonry? Would he abandon that prestigious position in favor of educating poor boys and working with simple and poorly educated teachers? Even the bishop raised similar concerns. These criticisms weighed heavily on Father de La Salle, but he worked through it and prayerfully continued to follow divine inspiration. He resigned as a canon of the cathedral and devoted himself to the full-time work of the education of the poor.

When his parents had died, Father de La Salle had inherited a small fortune. Though he considered using that money to found new schools, he decided instead to give it to the poor who were suffering from a famine in another city, and to rely completely on divine providence for the founding of more schools. Soon after, he founded the Institute of the Brothers of the Christian Schools. The brothers lived in common but did not pursue ordination to the priesthood. Instead, they devoted themselves exclusively to the education of poor young boys.

To better assist the brothers, Father de La Salle began to write and organize so as to form the brothers in the art of education. He developed a clear system and classroom structure which was new, ordered, and effective. Teaching poor boys from poorly formed families was challenging. Therefore, the teachers had to become true masters of teaching, not only of academics, but also of forming the boys in virtue and ordered living. Father de La Salle believed that every poor child should be educated for free. He also believed that the youth should learn to read and study in French, rather than in Latin. This was a new approach to education. Though he faced much resistance within and outside of the Church, he pressed on. He opened schools for teachers and his methods and institute grew rapidly.

Father de La Salle remarked later in life that if he had known what God would ask of him from the beginning, he would have never said "Yes." But God, in His perfect wisdom, led him one step at a time, and Father de La Salle only had to respond to one gentle prompting of grace at a time. Ponder the way God wants to work with you in the same way. He will most likely not reveal His entire plan for your life all at once. Instead, He will lead you and guide you today, giving you the grace you need to respond to His unfolding plan each moment. Say "Yes" today, tomorrow, and every day thereafter, and at the end of your life you will be amazed at how far God has brought you.

Saint John Baptist de La Salle, God led you one step at a time throughout your life. Your generosity to the promptings of grace in your heart led you down a path you could have never imagined. Please pray for me, that I will always be open to the plan God has for my life and will generously respond to that plan no matter what. Saint John Baptist de La Salle, pray for me. Jesus, I trust in You.

The Mass has ended, and many still do not know what to do with their palm.

Some leave it in the car; others throw it away after a few days. Without realizing it, they treat as something ordinary what has already been blessed.

That palm is no longer just a branch. It is a sacramental, a sign blessed by the Church to help us live closer to God.

So, what should we do?

The most common tradition is to keep it at home in a worthy place: near a crucifix, a sacred image, or a prayer corner. It is not meant to be a decoration, but a visible reminder that Christ is King in your life. It may also be placed at the door or on a wall as a sign of faith within the home.

Yet there is something even deeper. These palms are not simply discarded over time. They are kept with reverence or burned respectfully. Why? Because from these very palms come the ashes used on the following Ash Wednesday.

In this, the Church, with profound wisdom, unites two moments: the "Hosanna!" of Palm Sunday and the "Remember you are dust" at the beginning of Lent. It reminds us that the Christian life is not a passing emotion, but a constant path of conversion.

If this year you carried your palm with faith, do not forget it afterward. Let that sign remain in your home and in your heart.

Christ does not wish to enter your life for just one day, He desires to remain and reign every day of your life.
