POPE LEO XIV

P O P E L E O T H E F O U R T E E N T H

Pope Leo XIV was born as Robert Prevost in 1955 in Chicago, Illinois. On May 8, 2025, he made history by becoming the first American pope. This means he is now the leader of the Roman Catholic Church, which has 1.4 billion followers around the world. He took over after Pope Francis and chose the name "Leo XIV" to honor a past pope who showed compassion by helping others.

As a young boy, Leo grew up on the South Side of Chicago with two brothers. His parents were both educators, and he went to a special high school for boys who wanted to become priests. After high school, he studied maths in college and then joined a religious group called the Augustinians, who focus on community, education, and service.

After becoming a priest, Leo went to Peru to do missionary work. He lived in Peru for many years and later became a citizen of that country. Later, he returned to Chicago and took on leadership roles. In 2023, Pope Francis chose Bishop Robert to help pick new church leaders around the world. That same year, he became a cardinal, which meant he was one of the top church leaders.
