29th Sunday in Ordinary Time, Year B
21st October, 2018, Year B (Psalter Week 1)
Gospel Reflection © Richard Leonard SJ.

One Sunday morning during Mass, the congregation was surprised to see two men enter, both covered from head to toe in black and carrying submachine guns. One of the men proclaimed, 'Anyone willing to take a bullet for Christ remain where you are!' Immediately, the choir fled, altar servers fled, and most of the congregation fled. Within a few minutes, out of the two hundred strong congregation only ten people remained where they were. The man who had spoken took off his hood, looked at the priest and said, 'OK Father, I got rid of all the fence sitters, how about we make a start'. It's nice to see the priest in the story remained in the Church! I would like to think that faced with such an extreme moment like this I would have the courage of my convictions, but I must admit I have my doubts.

Each Sunday by coming and celebrating the Eucharist we implicitly, and explicitly, state that we want to become like Christ. As the Gospels repeatedly tell us if we follow him in his saving love for the world then, like him, we must confront injustice, defend the rights of the poor and the oppressed to dignity, give and forgive, heal and reconcile. By saying this, we are clearly not looking for a smooth ride through life. In concert with the whole Church what most of us have done is domesticate the hard edges of Jesus' teachings to suit our comfortable existences. And then we get a Gospel like today's. The sons of Zebedee want the best seats in the house without knowing what the admission price is going to cost. They want the glory without the gore. Jesus teaches them, and later all the other apostles, that for his Kingdom to come on earth as it is in heaven, requires of us to drink a cup of suffering and be baptised in a river of sacrificial love. We can't dress this teaching up, or put a good spin on it. There is no resurrection without the cross. No gain without the pain. For most of us this challenge means doing whatever we can politically and socially to bring the values of the Gospel to bear on our different spheres of influence. But Jesus also links this challenge to the act of service. And in this regard some leaders in the Church give us mixed messages and let us off the hook. Whatever of the patrimony of the past, today's Gospel reminds us that bishops, priests and deacons should be excellent models of the humility of service. The leadership Jesus advocates is not monarchical or tyrannical, it is being the least, and being a servant. The Second Vatican Council taught that leaders in the Church should be outstanding in humility, charity and simplicity of lifestyle. Some leaders are just this. Others have domesticated the hard edge of the Gospel. Let's pray in this Eucharist that we recover a love for the hard teachings of Jesus, even though they demand so much of us, and that we have the courage to call our leaders to do likewise. These teachings are, after all, what makes us different from the Gentiles, and sort out who is actually sitting on the fence.

Plenary Herald

Responsibility for the life of the church rests with all the People of God, laity and clergy. It has been said that, in the past, the clergy were happy for the laity to be docile and pious and to organise their faith life around devotional practices and deference to the clergy. This situation is now the focus of a monumental reform going on in the church throughout the world. Pope Francis has implored the clergy and laity to behave like co-responsible partners and to speak boldly about what they believe and how they live their faith.

The Plenary Council of the Australian church is in its first phase: preparation. Now is the time for the laity to speak boldly about their life in the church. Co-responsibility between laity and clergy is grounded in shared baptismal faith. This means that the mission of the church is the responsibility of all people who are baptised. In baptism, all the People of God are consecrated into the priesthood of Christ in its priestly, prophetic and royal dimensions. We are all builders of the community and culture of the church; we are all teachers; we are all rulers.

The word that the church uses to express this shared responsibility, this mutuality of exchange between laity and clergy is Synodality. The Plenary Council is the vehicle by which synodality will return to the church in Australia. This is the sign that the Holy Spirit is calling the laity of Australia to exercise their right and duty, as co-responsible partners, in regrounding the church in Australia in synodality.
