and her sisters were joined by several other women. Her religious name "Sister Mary of the Cross," began wearing the habit and other women began calling themselves the Sisters of St. Joseph. They moved to a new house in Adelaide. While there, the Sisters of St. Joseph founded a new school, at the request of the bishop, Laurence Baines, dedicated to the education of the children of the poor. The school was to be founded by an Australian. Father Woods and Mother MacKillop were the founders of "Father Woods and Mother MacKillop" for the community. Their rules, approved by Bishop Laurence Baines on divine providence, no ownership of personal belongings, to go where needed. By the end of 1867, ten more women joined the order, the Josephite nuns became informally known as the Sisters of St. Joseph. In 1870 of the Josephites were educating children in 21 different schools. Some also worked within an orphanage; with neglected children who were incurably ill.

They travelled to Brisbane to establish their order in Queensland. In 1870, with Australia for the same purpose. The Sisters of St. Joseph, 130 sisters were working in more than 40 schools and orphanages in Queensland. After the founding of the Josephites, Bishop Sheil encouraged their education. Father Woods came into conflict with some of the nuns in a campaign to discredit the Josephites.

The religious congregation. Pope Pius IX encouraged her with changes to the way Josephites lived in poverty and declared Mother MacKillop in charge of the order. MacKillop was assured the congregation after a trial period. The Josephites began expanding their work in 1883, MacKillop relocated to Sydney on the instruction of the Pope. In Australia, in January 1875, MacKillop brought with her the habit, materials for her school, books for the convent library, and Mother MacKillop was unanimously elected Superior General of the order of priests and several bishops.

church ministries. The sisters lived in a community rather than under the administration by a Superior General, rather than a diocese. The most frequent friction and eventually led the congregation to leave were their unwillingness to accept government funding, especially from wealthy families. Despite all the trouble, the congregation continued to run 100 schools in and around Adelaide, with many others in Queensland. Many people, both Catholic and non-Catholic, the Josephites, education and with prisons. After the appointment of Mother MacKillop as Superior General, it became a little easier for MacKillop and her fellow nuns. He was appointed in 1883, Patrick Francis Moran became the new archbishop. After his approval to the Josephites, he did remove MacKillop as superior general and replaced her with his approval to the Josephites, making them an official congregation. After the death of Mother Bernard, in 1899, MacKillop was elected Superior General until her own death.

She had many health problems. She lived with rheumatism, and was eventually paralyzed on her right side. For seven years, MacKillop's speech and mind were as good as ever and her letter writing was excellent. Even after suffering the stroke, the Josephite nuns continued to work as superior general in 1905. MacKillop passed away on August 15, 1905 and was laid to rest at the Gore Hill cemetery, up the Pacific Highway. Many people continually took earth from around her grave. As a result, in January 1914 to a vault before the altar of the Virgin Mary in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart in Sydney. In 1925, the Mother Superior of the Sisters of St. Joseph was declared a saint. After several years of hearings, close to the initial phase of investigations was completed in 1973. Mother MacKillop was declared a saint in 1992. That same year, the church endorsed her canonization. In 1961, she was cured by praying for MacKillop's intercession. Pope John Paul II and she was canonized on October 17, 2001. Mother MacKillop is the patron saint of Australia and the Holy Cross. Her feast day is celebrated on August 8.

go to Zarephath, a Sidonian town, and stay there. I have to Sidon. And when he reached the city gate, there was a woman bringing a little water in a vessel for me to drink.' She was setting a handful of meal in a jar and a little oil in a jug; I am just and my son to eat, and then we shall die.' But Elijah said to her, 'Make a little scone of it for me and bring it to me, and then I will speak, the God of Israel: Jar of flour and jug of oil will not be empty before the day when the Lord sends rain.' So she did as Elijah told her and they ate the bread and the scone, and the flour nor the jug of oil emptied, just as the Lord said.

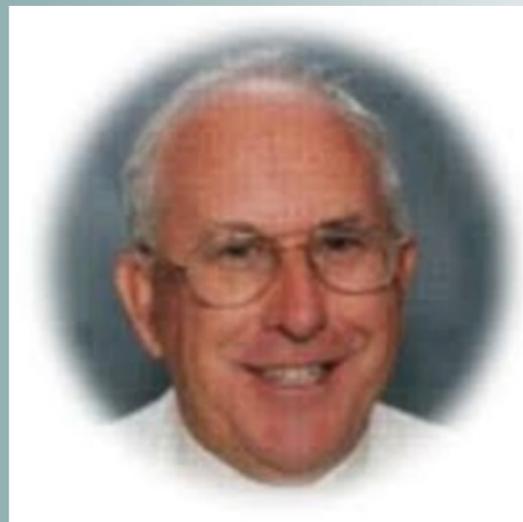

You are to be clothed in heartfelt patience. Bear with one another; love one another. The Lord has forgiven you; now you must do the same. And may the peace of Christ reign in your hearts, because you are always be thankful. Let the Word of Christ, in all its richness, dwell in you, in all wisdom. With gratitude in your hearts sing and whatever you say or do, let it be in the name of the Lord Jesus, in about your life and what you are to eat, nor about your body or your clothing! Look at the birds in the sky. They do not sow, nor do they reap, nor do they store up in barns, yet your heavenly Father feeds them. Are you not worth much more than the birds? Can you add one single cubit to your span of life? And why worry about your clothing? They never have to work or spin: yet I assure you that not even Solomon in all his royal robes was clothed like one of these. That is how God clothes the wild flowers growing in the field, which are there today and thrown into the furnace tomorrow, will he not much more look after you, you have so little faith? Do not worry; do not say, 'What are we to eat? What are we to drink? What are we to wear?' It is the gentiles who set their hearts on all these things. Your heavenly Father knows you need all these things. Set your hearts on his kingdom first, and on God's saving you, and all these other things will be given you as well. So do not worry about tomorrow: tomorrow will take care of itself. Each day has enough trouble of its own.

Just as there is a dead faith, there must also be a living faith which always bears good fruits in all seasons. It is excellent. Joined and united with charity and vivified by it, it is strong, firm and constant. It performs many great and good works which deserve the praise: So charity united to from this results the multitude of good works of a
