Alpha in a Catholic context continues at Carlingford

This Tuesday, we ask, "Why did Jesus die?"

Paul said the crowd he spoke to in Athens thought it was foolish! So do many today. Why on earth would someone die such a cruel death, when they had a choice? What has his death got to do with us? Where is God in all of this, if there is a God? How do you make sense of what happened?

What did Jesus mean when we hear in the Gospel, I am the good shepherd: the one who lays down his life for his sheep. The Father loves me because I lay down my life in order to take it up again. It is in my power to lay down my life, so it is in my power to take it up again. Jn 10:11-18

Join us this Tuesday in the parish hall at St Gerard's Carlingford.

Come for dinner at 7:00pm. We watch the Alpha video, enjoy a cuppa and take time to consider ~ Why did Jesus die? Call me on 0410 041 944, to let me know you have decided to go. You can take a friend. See you this Tuesday, 27th April.

Prepare for Pentecost

Join the disciples and Mary as they prayed, Come Holy Spirit.

The descent of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost transformed the Apostles and formed the Church. Through them, the whole world was changed. That same Spirit is still at work in the Church and the world today.

Join Professor Mary Healy to learn from the Acts of the Apostles. We can discover the dramatic power of the Holy Spirit in our lives and our families. We can share with our friends and neighbours.

We will join on Zoom to watch and discuss and pray. This is like a Lenten Group. You can join on a Monday or a Wednesday night from 7:30 pm.

To join on Zoom, please send an email to receive the Zoom invitation to denis.mcnamara@eppcarl.org.au

Supporting Disciples to become Missionary

Is Bible study needed? Think about the world around us.

We are living in a time when many in the West have abandoned Christian faith. They live as though they no longer believe. God's love has changed their lives.

In our days... in vast areas of the world the faith is in danger of dying out, like a flame which no longer has fuel. The real problem at this moment of our human history is that God is disappearing from the human horizon. The light which comes from God is dimming. Humanity is losing its bearings. The destructive effects are increasing and obvious. Pope Benedict XV

What supports marriage and family?

A world view that life is sacred, relationships and love matter. See how these values are at the heart of Pentecost. Hear how God's unfolding plan for us and for all humanity is revealed through the Holy Spirit in the Acts of the Apostles. Join us for 4 weeknights. Be prepared for Pentecost.

Reflection - Honoring an Abundant and Prodigal God

There's a disturbing trend within our churches today. Simply put, we are seeing the embrace of our churches become less-and-less inclusive. More and more, our churches are demanding a purity and exclusivity not demanded by Jesus in Gospels.

Indeed the very word "inclusivity" is often glibly dismissed as being part of the "I am spiritual but not religious" ethos, as if being inclusive were some kind of light-weight, New-Age, thing rather than a central demand within Christian discipleship itself.

*Inside God
there is no
scarcity, no stinginess, no sparing of

What does it mean to be inclusive? We can begin with the word "Catholic": The opposite of being "Catholic" is not being "Protestant." The opposite of "Catholic" is being narrow, exclusive, and overly selective in our embrace. The opposite of being "Catholic" is to define our faith-family too-narrowly. "Catholic" means wide, universal. It means incarnating the embrace of an abundant and prodigal God whose sun shines on all indiscriminately, the bad as well as the good. Jesus once defined this by saying: "In my father's house there are many rooms." God's heart is wide, abundant, prodigal, and universally-embracing, a heart that takes care to pray for those "other sheep who are not of this fold." To be "Catholic" is to imitate that.

Everyone else, without a single exception, falls short. In the gospels we see that Jesus' passion for inclusivity virtually always trumps his concern for purity and worthiness. He associates and dines with sinners without setting any prior moral conditions that have to be met to before those sinners are deemed worthy of his presence. His disciples, much like many good sincere church-people today, were forever trying to keep certain people away from him because they deemed them unworthy; but Jesus always answered that he didn't need that kind of protection, and that, indeed, he wanted them all to come to him: let them come to me! Indeed, that is still Jesus' call: Let them come to me, all of them!

We need to be more inclusive. I highlight this because today our faith families are shrinking and instead of us weeping empathically about this loss of wholeness we are more prone to be secretly gleeful about it: good riddance: they weren't real Christians anyway! Or, in the words of some Catholic commentators, they were Cafeteria-Catholics, picking and choosing which parts of the Gospel they liked and turning a meaty Catholicism into Catholic-Light.

Such a judgment, however sincere and well intentioned, needs to operate under two huge caution flags: First, such a judgment leaves the person making it rather vulnerable. Who is a true, fully practicing Catholic? Several years ago, I was asked by a Roman Catholic School Board to write a definition of what it means to be a "practicing Catholic." I agonized over the task, examined the classical working definitions for that, and eventually produced a bit of a formula. But I prefaced the definition with this preamble: only Jesus and Mary were fully practicing Catholics. Everyone else, without a single exception, falls short. We are all Cafeteria-Catholics. We all fall short; all have shortcomings, and all live the Gospel somewhat selectively. To cite the most salient example: many of us bear down more on church-going and private morality, to the neglect of the non-negotiable Gospel demand regarding justice; others simply reverse this. Who's closer to Jesus? Who's more of a Cafeteria-Catholic?

The answer to that question lies inside the secret realm of conscience. But what we do know is that none of us gets it fully right. All of us stand in need of God's forgiveness and all of us stand in need of the patience of our ecclesial communities.

The second caution flag is this: the God that Jesus reveals to us is a God of infinite abundance. Inside God there is no scarcity, no stinginess, no sparing of mercy. As the parable of the sower makes clear, this God scatters his seed indiscriminately on every kind of soil—bad soil, mediocre soil, good soil, excellent soil. God can do this because God's love and mercy are limitless. God, it seems, never worries about someone receiving cheap, undeserved grace. As well, Jesus assures us that God is prodigal: like the father of the prodigal son and his older brother, God embraces both the missteps of our immaturity as well as the bitterness and resentment within our maturity. Good religion needs to honor that.

Today, on both sides of the ideological divide, conservative or liberal alike, we need to remind ourselves of what it means to live under an abundant, prodigal, universally-embracing, and "Catholic" God. What it means, among other things of course, is a constant stretching of the heart to an ever-wider inclusivity. How wide are our hearts?

Exclusivity can mask itself as depth and as passion for truth; but it invariably reveals itself, in its inability to handle ambiguity and otherness, as rigidity and fear, as if God and Jesus needed our protection. More importantly, it often too reveals itself as lacking genuine empathy for those outside its own circle; and, in that, it fails to honor its own abundant and prodigal God.
